

Webcast Takeaways

1

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) is the best one-stop shop for personal protective equipment requirements and identification.

2

Having checklists for interfacility transport can help reduce the risk of serious adverse events, especially when unfamiliar equipment or augmented personnel are in use during times of high stress such as disasters and outbreaks.

3

Care coordination through multiple layers of infrastructure will ensure safe and comfortable patient transport between facilities.